

For years I worked as a police officer and later a detective, dealing with people on the worst days of their lives, building relationships, solving problems, and working on teams that changed on a daily basis. After working several emotionally intense cases, I chose to retire early after almost 15 years of service.

I went to work for a pharmacy chain and learned an all new career on an all new team. I integrated back into corporate life from the public sector and saw a lot of success.

In 2019, after a long and cold winter, I decided I no longer wanted to spend the whole year in Wisconsin. I want to travel and find a career that is location independent. This brings me to today.

Here's a few things about me that I can highlight:

- I am tenacious. When I was in law enforcement, I never lost a case. I don't like to lose.
- I like to teach. I was a field training officer in law enforcement and even after I moved into pharmacy, I still mentored and taught new employees twice a month during orientation.
- I am a problem solver. I have a degree in Physics – which just means I like to solve problems.
- I like to learn. I am currently enrolled in graduate school for my MBA. I am a lifelong learner.
- I like teams. I think everyone brings something different to the table when it comes to teams – I embrace differences as they produce the best multi-disciplinary teams around.
- I know how to talk to people. A career in law enforcement teaches you to listen to others, and how to talk and work with just about anyone.
- I am technical. I love technology and finding ways to use it to my team's advantage.

I would appreciate the opportunity to learn more about your company and discuss my potential role. I appreciate you taking the time to consider me.

All the best,
